THE SECRET OF A. T. STEWARTS MERCANTILE SUCCESS.

Probably the most striking instance of adherence to a few rigid rules is afforded by the man who leads the mercantile world of this continent. Men envy his success who might have they but infaxibly held to similar rules.

First and foremost in the stand

Purchasers were not slow to there need be no fear of imposition. they were sure of having the truth must tell the truth, and he had the injunction so conspicuously placed that his employees were perpetually reminded of the great rule of the esnatural consequence of this course was the rigid self-advertising power women say, "Go or send there, for availing themselves of the advantage. The rigid observance of the "oneprice system" was a rule necessarily co-operative with the first. Dealers confess that it is exceedingly difficult to maintain this rule, and where a large proportion of business is transacted on credit it is well nigh impossible; but when the rule is "pay on delivery," it can be maintained.

Comfort is brought to the household of every customer when he feels confident that he can send a child or a servant to make a purchase, and he to go himself. It is a great thing for the merchant to discover that the money of the poor man is as good as How many a kiss has been given, the money of the rich-the cash of the

Around me-save God's and my own;

Whose music my heart could not win;

Where I met but the Human-and Sin

I crave what the world never gave;

And I said: "In the world, each Ideal,

Is tossed on the shores of the Real

And still did I ume for the Perfect.

I sought 'mid the Human for Heaven

That shines like a sour on life's wave,

And sleeps like a dream in a grave."

And sill found the False with the True;

But I caught a mere glimpse of its Blue,

Veiled even that glimpse from my view

And I toiled on, heart-tired of the Human;

And I moaned 'mid the mazes of men;

And heard a Voice call me-since than

Do you ask what I found in the Valley?

An echo-"My heart shall be Thine."

I weep-and I dream-and I pray-

In the hush of the Valley of Silence

I dream all the songs that I sing; And the music floats down the dim Valley

Till each fluds a word for a wing.

That to men, like the dove of the Deluge

But far on the Deep there are billows

And I have heard songs in the Silence

That never shall float into speech;

And I have had dreams in the Valley

The message of Peace they may bring

Till I knelt long ago at the Altar

I walk down the Valley of Silence

That lies far to youd mortal ken.

And I wept when the clouds of the Morta walked thro' the world with the worldly
